About the Book

Love on the Road 2015 is an anthology of twelve stories of love and travel. They offer the reader a meet-cute on the streets of Zimbabwe, a classic American roadtrip, a story that explores emotional abuse, and an encounter between a withdrawn war veteran and his beautiful neighbour in Iran.

The only non-fiction story in the collection, Janus: A Path to the Future by Nod Ghosh, demonstrates a unique test of love between a struggling yet devoted married couple. The author highlights the challenges of being by her husband's side as he makes the decision to change his gender. The transition from male to female and the effect it has on a marriage is documented with brutal honesty. Janus: A Path to the Future results in being one of the most remarkably tender stories the collection.

Love on the Road includes stories by writers from Australia, Ireland, Kenya, Malawi, New Zealand, the UK, the USA and Zimbabwe. The authors have won or been nominated for prizes and awards including the Caine Prize for African Writing, the Frank O'Connor International Short Story Award, the Flannery O'Connor Award for Short Fiction, the Pushcart Prize and Kenya's National Book Week Literary Award.

About the Editors

Sam Trantum is an American journalist, author and editor. Lois Kapila is a British journalist and translator. Between them, they have covered the energy business, government, politics, and human rights issues around the world. They met in the spring of 2009 and managed to overcome cultural differences fast enough to marry five months later. They lived in Kyrgyzstan, the USA and India before moving to Dublin. They started the Love on the Road competition from their kitchen in Kolkata (Calcutta) in 2012 because they needed a change from the often bleak subjects they regularly wrote about as journalists.
